

About Medical Finals

Last Updated Friday, 24 August 2007

MedicalFinals.co.uk is a free website established by a group of junior doctors. Our origins are in Belfast being graduates of The Queen's University of Belfast.

We remember very well that revising for finals exams can be a lonesome and difficult affair. Our aim is to provide resources, both written and practical, to help current students prepare for finals exams. This includes exam advice, multiple choice questions, case vignettes and sample x-rays, along with our established mock OSCE's. These mock OSCE's occur in Belfast each year for free thanks to the very kind assistance of the clinical skills centre at Queen's University.

Ian worked as PRHO and medical SHO in The Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast.

He now works as a radiology registrar in Sheffield.

clonvarayahoo.co.uk

Paul worked as PRHO and medical SHO in The Belfast City Hospital.

He is now an SpR in clinical pharmacology.

pk_hamiltonyahoo.co.uk

Stephen worked as PRHO and medical SHO in Craigavon Hospital, and The Royal Victoria Hospital.

He is now studying an MRes in Bioinformatics in Leeds.

sbridgettlineone.net

Sandy Davey,

Junior Researcher,

5th year

medical student,

Belfast

Andrew Black,

Junior Researcher,

4th year medical student,

Belfast

We have a range of contributors to the site offering material on their fields of expertise.

We would also like to welcome Sandy and Andrew who will be helping with further developing the medicalfinals site.

How did it all happen?

It started in spring of 2002, when Stephen found reading books a troublesome way to revise for clinical final. As it was a practical type exam and with a memory of getting together to revise for 3rd year OSCE's - organising a mock OSCE style exam seemed a good idea. Students could practise examinations, present findings and answer questions with other students acting as patients and examiners in a stress free environment. Initially it seemed a one off idea that wouldn't amount to anything, but Stephen and Ian decided to run it the following year and it seemed popular. It has run every year since. The site is now expanding to include help for written finals and a general resource for medical students.

The site is for you all, so please give us feedback and ideas of what else you would like to see on medicalfinals.co.uk

Disclaimer:

Although the authors and contributors to this web-site do their utmost to ensure the reliability of all information contained therein, we cannot be held responsible for the material's accuracy or for any actions taken based on this information. We would encourage readers to confirm that all information is correct, up to date, and in keeping with current medical practice.

Privacy:

Confidentiality of the data relating to individual patients and visitors to this website, including their identity, is respected by this Web site. We do not disclose email address (eg: submitted to feedback or quizzes) to third parties. We undertake to honour the legal requirements of health information legislation within the UK and Ireland.

Advertising:

This site does display logos from our sponsors and provide links to enable you to purchase books, but currently we do not accept advertisements.